Discuss IT Topic: If you had the ability to download memories throughout your life to then one-day review them like a photo album, would you do it? These memories have to be kept on the cloud. This means you are connected and your eyesight would be no different than looking through a camera.

Response: Please make sure all grammar, spelling, indentation, and punctuation is correct.

This question is hard to answer. By one side I could see the good in downloading all your memories, for example if you have a family history of dementia or Alzheimer's it's a great idea to have all your memories saved so that way each time you forget something you can just play the "video" back. On the other hand, everything being saved on the cloud is not such a great idea, especially if everyone else can see your memories. I think it is creepy that everyone can see everything you did your whole life, just because of the dumb things we all do sometimes. If only you could see your personal memories, then yes, I would do it. But since it is on the cloud and everyone could see my memories, then no. I do not want to save them.
